Career people help sick kids

By Chris Treadway
The Montclarion

John Basich and Ellovoy Thomas are Montclair professionals who take time each week after the completion of unteers.

Basich and Thomas are typical of the 280 "non-traditional" people who donate time in the hospital's wards, said Barbara Schaaf, head of Children's volunteer their everyday jobs to do volunteer work. They volunteer at the same place, yet they have never met.

They are from different backgrounds and have different occupations, but they share a common denominator in the young patients at Children's Hospital in Oakland, where both are vol-

"Our people are not traditional hospital volunteers," she said. "We have a wide range of people because we have a wide range of patients."

By "traditional," Schaaf was referring to the concept of Women work on thwarting crime

Retirees keep streets safe

Franklin Lynch targeted East Bay single, elderly women who lived alone in detached houses on quiet lots. He specialized in

During the summer and fall of 1987 Lynch made his way into the Area headlines and into the conscious minds of Bay Area residents. One of his assault victims was an Albany woman who was found in her home two days after a vicious attack.

Betty and Rose, two women who live in Albany near the scene of the assault, began an informal Neighborhood Watch group four years ago.

At the time they started the program on their street, the women weren't even aware that there was an official name for what they did by instinct.

But, according to Rose, their work really took off in 1987 after the Lynch incident.

"That's what really rattled the bars," said Betty. (The women asked that they not be identified by their last names.)

The trees and the majority of citizens on the 1000 block of Talbot Avenue are mature. It is a stable neighborhood.

"We don't lose people unless they die," said Betty, 62. "We're the young ones on the block."

Rosie, her partner in crime prevention, is 60. Both are retired.

As the youngsters on the block, the two women have demonstrated a concern for security of their street. In mid-November they hand-wrote flyers detailing incidents that had occurred in the neighborhood and provided safety tips to help keep the neighborhood safe during the holiday season.

Then they went house to house distributing the flyers. Rosie took one side of the street, Betty the other.

"Once you see a notice hand-written and hand-delivered by a neighbor," said Dorothy Brown, who lives in the area, "It really makes you take notice — more so than reading it in the paper."

The flyer called for a Saturday afternoon meeting Nov. 18. About 15 neighbors showed up. Albany Police Chief Larry Murdo brought two videos and literature on community safety.

Rosie and Betty baked cookies and offered tea and coffee during the meeting. As neighbors got acquainted, the one-hour meeting stretched into three.

Nothing much unusual or suspicious looking gets by Rosie and Betty. They are aware of strangers who come on the block.

"We look into things," said Betty. "Oh, yes!" Rosie added.

Volunteer cares for animals

Career woman concerned about animal rights

By Dawn Frasier

Every day Kathie Long does bookkeeping and secretarial work for the Oakland Rubber Stamp Company. But at least once a week, Long spends several hours walking dogs, cuddling cats and cleaning cages.

The animals don't belong to her, though. She and her husband Dan, Piedmont residents for 20 years, have only two pets — Mocha and Misty, their golden retrievers.

For almost six years, Long has worked as a volunteer for the Oakland S.P.C.A. She sought out the volunteer position because of her love for animals.

"I've always been interested in animal rights," she said. She's hesitant to call herself an activist because she knows that the connotations can turn people off.

But she's definitely been active. For years she has written letters urging legislation on various animal issues.

Long said one of her main concerns is elimination of veal crates, the method used by most veal farmers to produce whiter, more tender veal. Because the crates keep the calves from doing what

Teachers love work

Husband, wife team coach special Olympian athletes

By Rob D'Amico

Michelle and Jerry Silsdorf know all about the hassles of coaching kids — it's rough.

But they still choose to devote their time to special athletes, because the rewards of working with kids who have developmental disabilities are more than they can resist.

The Oakland couple coaches Special Olympians in track and field and sets up an annual Special Olympics aquatics meet at Laney College.

It's a demanding, but unpaid job. Silsdorf, 36, also teaches special education at Skyline and her husband, 35, does property maintenance in San Francisco.

The Silsdorfs spend their spring Saturdays coaching the kids for an Oakland track meet held every year in April. The pair teaches the Special Olympians running, jumping and other events, like the softball throw.

After the spring track and field meet, it's back to work as they start planning the aquatics meet.

The planning takes at least two weeks of heavy preparation, which includes filling out medical forms and other paperwork for competitors, and finding other volunteers to serve as officials and life guards.

The Silsdorfs' involvement with Special Olympics grew from the wife's work with one kid on her swim team who had a developmental disability.

From her experiences with him, she became interested in working with other kids with special needs.

After working as an instructional aide in the Oakland Unified School District, she ultimately went back to school and got her certification to teach special education.

Silsdorf said she made a commitment to working with Special Olympics in 1976, after she was invited to attend the state competition at the University of California-Los Angeles as a chaperon for a young man on her swim team.

"At that time, I fell in love with Special Olympics," she said.

She noted that the Special Olympics events are a moving experience. At the games' opening ceremonies "there's never a dry eye in the crowd," she said.

Once Silsdorf became entrenched with her volunteer work, her husband was soon to follow. It seemed natural for him to help out, since he always competed in various sports and was a good organizer and disciplinarian.

Having your wife as your helper makes the job easier, he said. "If she's busy filling out paperwork ... it gives me the chance to work with the athletes

Teacher helps students learn language

Couple's interest in China produced cultural exchange

By Rebecca Lawrence

Guanglin Wu wants to learn everything he can about the American way of life.

Hill resident Eleanor Gayner is doing her bit to teach him.

Gayner and Wu — a Chinese geologist who is currently on loan to the UC-Berkeley engineering faculty — are partners in "English in Action."

English in Action is an informal tutoring program organized by volunteers over 20 years ago for the university's visiting foreign scholars and their families.

Gayner is a part-time teacher of English as a Second Language, but her interest in the program goes beyond the strictly professional.

She and her husband, Jim, are active in the US-China People's Friendship Association and recently spent three months studying and traveling in the People's Republic.

"I wanted to keep the tie and the connection alive," said Gayner. She hopes Wu will help refine her skill in Chinese — even if it's just so she can read the signs in the shops in Chinatown, she said.

"When we traveled in China, I used the language. But you don't get into in-depth conversations," Gayner said. "You find out how to get on the buses."

The Gayners have lived in their Oakland hills home for nearly 24 years.

In fact, Jim Gayner built it.

The family moved in when daughter Gretchen, 23, was an infant. Son Jay was born shortly after the move. The Gayner's youngest son, Wally, is 20.

The elder Gayners are teachers by profession, but they are a family of naturalists, Eleanor said. The Gayners have had a side-line business in forestry for several years, and both sons are completing their college degrees in fields related to agricultural management.

Gayner also volunteers as a docent in the Natural Sciences Gallery at the Oakland Museum.

Her husband's fascination for China led to their involvement in the Friendship Association. The couple has had Chinese students living in their home and have organized hikes and camping trips for the organization's Chinese members.

"We still feel a big connection to China," Gayner said. "Being there) was such a very special experience, because we were travelers but not tourists."

English language teacher Eleanor Gayner chats with her student Guanglin Wu.

They would like to go back someday.

When Wu and Gayner sit down, they often "chit-chat." The conversation is apt to wander in far-flung directions.

Over tea and cookies at the group's recent Christmas gathering, Wu asked about a term he'd heard someone use to describe the university — "Berzerkeley."

Gayner didn't miss a beat, but carefully explained that "berserk means crazy, and for some people, Berkeley is a crazy place."

"But don't judge it just on the name," she added.

Wu seemed satisfied, if mystified, by the explanation, and for his part, was able to tutor Gayner in the use of a Chinese herbal tea she'd been given by a friend.

"For colds, very warm," said. "But I prefer western Wu's conversations Gayner have helped him and his mouth to American nunciations, he said.

"It is very beneficial," said. "And I can imagine Mrs. Gayner Chinese because I think she's interested."

New hotline established for job hunters

Job hunting took a giant step towards the 21st century with the formation of a new company, 900-JOBS: The Job Finders' Hotline.

The new service makes use of Pacific Bell's California 900 phone program.

By dialing 1-900-844-JOBS

callers get immediate access 24 hours a day to hundreds of new job listings that never reach the classified ads.

For one dollar per minute the 900-JOBS network gives the caller private, comprehensive descriptions of the job listings and a contact name. A typical inquiry takes three or four minutes.

Charges appear on the caller's regular monthly Pacific Bell phone bill.

The 900-JOBS network works with independent personnel agencies whose listings are added and deleted daily via FAX machines.

Callers to The Job Finders' Hotline are guided through menus of selections available on touch tone phones.

Based in San Francisco, 900-JOBS serves the 415 and 707 area codes. It is expanding into the 408 area which serves San Jose and Santa Clara.

Quilt project collects toys

Crack babies, homeless kids helped in Christmas season

 apologizing for the mere sight of giving away empty boxes.
 Dehler, a single parent of a 17-year-old daughter, said, "Somehow a miracle is going to happen and all those things will be filled."
 The "miracle" continued, as mostly women accompanied by children — stopped by Quilt Project's headquarters at 471 Addison St. in Berkeley — picked up not only candy for the stockings, but bags filled with toys.
 So far, the Quilt Project has collected 650 toys for homeless children in the Bay Area. Dehler hopes to boost the number of toys to 2,000.
 The Children's Quilt Project expanded rapidly — from a five-member group when it started about two years ago, to 100 adult and 1,000 children volunteers nationwide.
 Dehler's initial goal — presenting 15 to 20 quilts per year to children with AIDS or with HIV infection — expanded this year to 100 quilts sewn in California alone.
 Along with the increased number of quilts, the project has broadened its group of recipients far beyond the 16 children suffering from AIDS in Oakland and San Francisco.
 The project currently donates toys to crack-addicted babies and homeless children as well.

"If we hear of some other needy child, we'll give them a quilt, too," said Dehler.
 The Quilt Project helps a variety of organizations, ranging from Oakland's Children's Hospital to the Salvation Army and the East Oakland Food Pantry.
 Last Sunday, Linda Tucker, coordinator for a foster mother project based in San Francisco, picked up three piles of quilts from the Berkeley project.
 Tucker's Baby Mom project receives basic funding, she said. But the funding is not enough to buy quilts or toys for the 32 babies with AIDS or HIV infection in 18 foster homes in the Bay Area.
 "It's wonderful people are putting together this project," Tucker said. "Otherwise we'd really be out in the cold."
 Praise like this keeps the volunteers coming back to quilt, wrap Christmas presents or stuff stockings.
 Like young Jesse, most volunteers feel good about helping others. Many also enjoy spending time with like-minded people.
 "You know those ads about vacation as the 'antidote' for civilization?" asked Cynthia Tompkins, 34, a housewife from San Pablo. "That's what this is for me."
 Director Dehner said she regrets that her quilting days are over. Now, the work of finding donors who give cloth for the quilts and finding enough gifts to fill all the stockings takes up most of her time.

 "It's going to happen," she said, hopeful that all 2,000 stockings will be filled with candy and toys.
 "If you donate one toy that you'd give to your children or grandchildren to a homeless child, you're really giving your child a true present. You'll teach them what Christmas is all about," Dehner said, urging donors to fill the stockings and make the miracle she envisions come true.

 For Jesse and his sister, Nadja — "five-and-three-quarters," she said — the main problem is not so much where the candy comes from, as what to do with the empty candy boxes piling up on the floor.
 "I just thought of something funny," Jesse said, as he emptied the contents of candy cane boxes onto the table.

 "If we did too many boxes, pretty soon the room would be filled with boxes."
 Nadja nodded her head, showing concern. Then both went on stuffing stockings, making sure that every one got a candy cane.
 Dehler shares Jesse's concerns about finding enough space for boxes. She is stockpiling the wrapped toys in her two-bedroom apartment until organizations send someone to pick up the gifts.

 Like Jesse and Nadja, she remains unruffled about the space problem.
 "I'll just put everything in my bedroom and sleep on the couch in the living room," she said, laughing at how easy that problem was to solve.

Amateur astronomer helps Chabot Center

Terry Galloway stands in front of Chabot Science Center, where he has worked as a volunteer for public interest in science for 20 years.

Planetarium focus for public science education

By Ken Epstein
The Montclairion

Terry Galloway, chemical engineer and amateur astronomer, has dedicated much of his life trying to kindle public interest in studying science.

"This country has a big problem," he said. "We have to do everything we can to turn the students on to science and technology. We are already badly behind."

Though discouraged by what he considers official indifference, Galloway, 49, has worked for 20 years as a volunteer to spread curiosity about science among adults and children in Oakland and the rest of the East Bay.

Volunteering at least 10 hours a week, he serves on the board of directors of the East Bay Astronomical Society, which provides the rank-and-file volunteers who teach classes and operate the planetarium and observatory at the Chabot Science Center, 4917 Mountain Blvd., near Mills College.

Part of Galloway's work involves coordinating volunteers.

The astronomical society has 260 members, including about 60 who volunteer at the science center.

Galloway also helps out wherever the center needs him, whether lecturing on the Greenhouse effect or aiding a research project on Bay Area air pollution.

At present, he spends much time fundraising for the center's new home above Skyline Boulevard near Redwood Peak. Construction at the site is expected to begin in a year and last for about four years.

Raising money may not be as much fun as conducting experiments but it is important, Galloway said. The center has survived only because we have been willing to do what is necessary.

Run by the Oakland School District, the center often been without funds and faced closure three times in its 75 years ago, Galloway said.

And the efforts have been a part of the education on the part of Oakland residents said.

"Whenever I speak in front of people who tell me their children, they were first introduced to science at the center."

Center's chief has many jobs

Good Samaritan director also involved in scouting

By Carolyn Draheim

Oakland hill resident, Cleveland Thomas Jr., is a man on the move.

Twice a week, Thomas and his faded Pontiac with imitation wood trim wind the length of the city, stopping at board and care homes to pick up his elderly

"regulars" for a morning at the Good Samaritan Center.

To the small group of frail aging Oaklanders, the battered blue station wagon that arrives at their doors is no less than a chariot whisking them away for a morning of companionship, bingo, exercise, art and music.

"It's the only time in the week they have a chance to go out," said Thomas. "They are so happy to see the car in the morning, it makes me feel good."

Thomas, 60, is the director of the center on 10th Street, a volunteer job he "fell into" several years ago when the building's PG&E meter was stolen and he stepped in to clean up the resulting mess.

He has been with the center ever since, planning activities, refurbishing and maintaining the building and paying the bills, often with money out of his own pocket.

Three days a week, Thomas and his aging yellow van make the rounds of bakeries and restaurants for donations of day-old bread and food for the center.

Twice a month, Thomas distributes free bags of food to the community. With the help of volunteers one recent Friday, he passed out 127 bags filled with vegetables, bread, potatoes and canned goods.

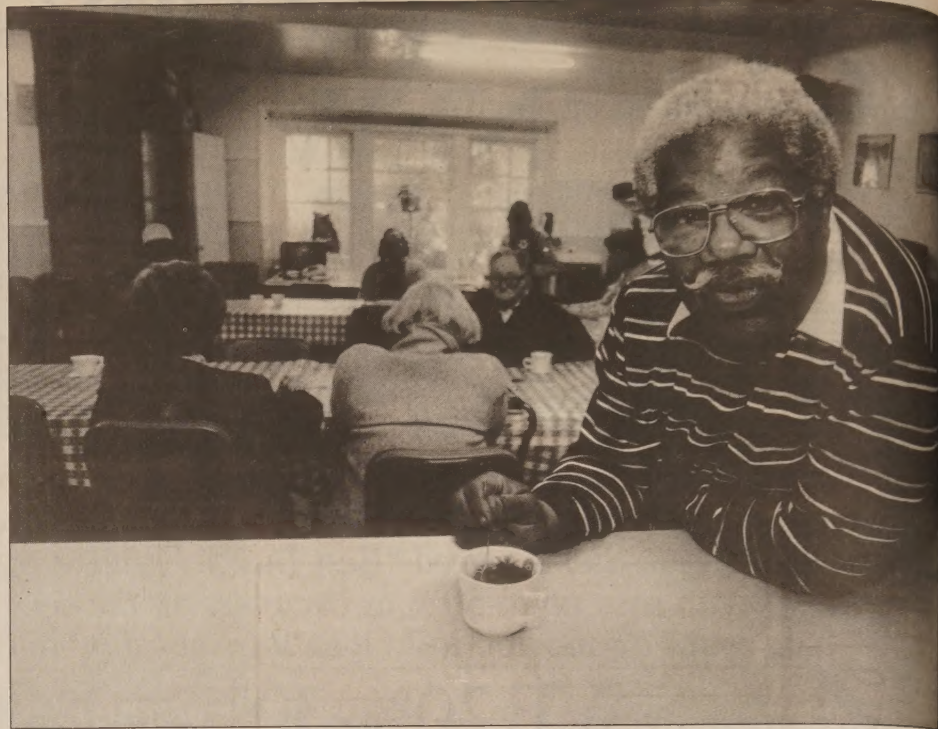

"In 50 minutes we went through 150 pounds of potatoes, about 400 cans, and 37 banana boxes filled with bread," he said.

Those who volunteer at the center say that the tall, gray-haired Thomas imparts a special magic to all he does.

"Going to Cleve's is like going to a family," said the center's art instructor Patsy Newhouse, a VISTA volunteer.

"He's very wise, sensitive and smart," she said. "His whole purpose is to make life better for these older people, to give them an environment where people like them and care about them."

Although running the center absorbs most of the retired electrical designer's energy, Thomas manages to find time for his other consuming interest — scouting.

Cleveland Thomas Jr. volunteers a lot of hours as director of the Good Samaritan Center in Oakland.

As activities chairman for the Peralta district, Thomas oversees all the activities for Cub Scouts in Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda. He became involved with the Scouts 24 years ago when his son was active in the organization.

Thomas is disturbed by the continuing drop in the number of boys active in Scouts.

"There are so many distractions for boys these days," he said. To encourage as many boys as possible to join Scouts, Thomas and several others collect and dispense used uniforms to any boy who needs one.

Thomas also sits on the Eagle board of review, the final stage for Scouts working toward their Eagle badge.

"Cleve sits there quietly smoking his pipe and putting the boys at ease," said Montclair resident Howard Waits, an assistant scout master who has known Thomas for nearly a decade. "It's a pleasure to watch him. He is so big-hearted and he's the work horse of the district."

In 1976, the San Francisco Bay Area Council recognized Thomas' efforts by awarding him the silver beaver award, the highest award to a nonprofessional in Scouting. Thomas' community involvement began when he was a teen in the early 1940s. He and a group of friends in San Francisco's Fillmore district banded together to form the Royal Escorts, an informal service organization that raised money to provide college scholarships for young people.

"We gave dances and managed to come up with for each scholarship," he said.

To find deserving students, group advertised in the area and interviewed prospective candidates. Before disbanding years later, the Royal sponsored 10 college students. One is now a doctor in Berkeley and another psychiatrist in Los Angeles.

Animals' lives enhanced

calves naturally do —eat grass, nuzzle other calves, chew cuds —, the animals get sick. Farmers then give them antibiotics, which pass into the veal.

Long has actively written letters to the California legislature and through her involvement with the Humane Farming Association, is working on educating the public.

"We're asking farmers to raise the calves in a natural, humane way," she said.

But writing letters and working for change wasn't enough for Long. She wanted to do something more "hands-on."

She looked around the community for some way to be involved with animals and discovered the S.P.C.A.

At that time few volunteers were involved, and the S.P.C.A. had a real need for someone to socialize with the animals and exercise them.

Long walked in to see over 80 kennels. Some of the dogs had not been walked for four or five days.

Cats, she found, didn't need the exercise so much, but they did need to be handled, held and talked to.

"I didn't know where to begin," she said. "It was really hard."

But she did begin and still spends most of her time working directly with the animals. "I really love taking care of them," she said. "Even cleaning cages doesn't bother me."

The S.P.C.A. keeps most of the animals indefinitely, Long said. Some dogs have stayed two to three months and then have been adopted. "We do euthanize animals," she said, "but we're very careful about the choice made."

Several people make the decision, which is based on physical and emotional health (some animals don't kennel well) and on available space.

Educating the community about what the S.P.C.A. does and how it works is also important to Long. For the last four years she has helped with the Mobile Adoption Unit, which educates the public and takes animals out to be adopted.

There are more volunteers now than when Long started, but more are always needed, she said. And it's not always necessary to work directly with the animals.

"Some people find it too heartbreaking to work with the animals," Long said. "You want to take them all home with you. I felt that way at the beginning, but you grow past that. You know that what you're doing is making a difference in the quality of their lives."

Volunteers may work in the reception office, answer the phones or groom animals. Some people go to schools to educate kids about responsible animal care.

Long said the S.P.C.A. likes to have visitors come to see the facility, even if they don't plan to volunteer or adopt an animal. Located at 8323 Baldwin St., off Hegenberger Road near the Coliseum, visitors sometimes have low expectations since it's an industrial area.

"But we have a huge amount of land, all landscaped in back," Long said. "It's gorgeous."

What's important to Long is that people in the community get involved in something.

"I'm always pushing volunteerism at cocktail parties," she said. "They're probably sick of it."

But Long believes there is so much need for people to give just a little of their time. If not with animals, then with any number of other possibilities.

"I can't say enough about volunteering," she said, "even if it's only a few hours a week like I do. It's the most fulfilling thing."

Booklet tells how to prune

During winter dormancy is a popular time to prune trees, and a free booklet is available from The National Arbor Day Foundation to show you how.

The illustrated guide called How To Prune Young Shade Trees has been prepared for homeowners.

How a tree is pruned in its first few years of life will effect its shape, its strength, and even its life span.

The How to Prune guide includes step-by-step illustrations showing how proper pruning in the early years of a tree's life can save money in the long run and result in more beautiful, healthy, easy-to-maintain trees.

The booklet is filled with illustrations showing you how to make a pruning cut, how to prune for desired form, how to strengthen your tree by removing certain branches, how to maintain the tree's health by removing trouble spots, when to leave temporary lower branches, and when to cut them.

The booklet even shows how to hold a pair of pruning shears and how to make pruning cuts at the proper angle.

To obtain your free copy of this booklet, send your name and address to: How To Prune, National Arbor Day Foundation, Nebraska City, NE 68410.

Busy cop finds time to help the elderly

Chauffeur duties enjoyable

By Neva Hull

Ken Douglas — husband, father, writer, medical technician, policeman, marksman, fisherman, movie buff and ... volunteer.

Volunteer? With such a busy schedule, how has Douglas, soon to retire from the Oakland Police Department, found the time for volunteering?

"I make time," he explained over a muffin and coffee.

Spoken like a dedicated volunteer, for that's what it's all about — putting one's own cares and problems aside and taking time from self-interests in order to make time for others.

In short, stepping in where needed and giving freely of one's self.

Douglas became involved in the Piedmont Gardens Retirement Home volunteer program while serving as an Oakland Police Department foot patrolman on the nearby Piedmont Avenue beat.

The retirement home's bus, which takes residents on shopping expeditions, needed another driver.

Douglas took on the position, and now drives residents to the Rockridge shopping center and assists them with shopping when they need help.

Some preliminaries were involved before Douglas could begin driving a busload of people around town. He first had to apply for a chauffeur's license at the DMV.

"I had to study the book and take a three-and-a-half hour test," he said. He also underwent a supervised driving test before the license was issued.

There is only one man in Douglas' shopping group.

"The gentleman," said Douglas, "claims that he doesn't really need to do any shopping but just goes along to protect the women from me." Douglas said he gets more out of his Piedmont Gardens friends than he gives.

A family man, Douglas and wife Sharon have two sons, 22 and 10, and a daughter 15, and celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary last July.

In his column, titled "Ken the Cop," in the Piedmont Avenue

Douglas says he gets more out of Piedmont Gardens friends than he gives ... He is thankful ... (he is) in touch with so many wonderful people.

Merchants Association tabloid, Douglas writes thoughtful educational pieces on such subjects as recognizing scams, identifying the characteristics of shoplifters, guarding against purse snatchers and teaching children how to recognize dangerous situations.

Douglas not only volunteers his services as chauffeur on a regular basis, but he also regularly visits a retired friend he met on his beat.

And a one-on-one visit with Douglas makes to his friends another way of giving of self.

Contemplating retirement from the police force, Douglas wrote in his tabloid column he is thankful his Piedmont Avenue assignment brought him in touch with so many wonderful people. He called the assignment a "blessing."

non-working women filling the volunteer ranks.

About 20 percent of volunteers are men (the statewide average is six percent) and 28 percent are people who work full time elsewhere.

There are also a variety of motivations for becoming a volunteer.

"Most of us don't set out with one reason in mind," said Thomas, a licensed real estate broker with Mason-McDuffie's Montclair office who has logged more than 900 hours at Children's since 1980. "I think it's different for each of us."

Doing volunteer work is something Thomas takes for granted.

"It's almost like I've been volunteering all my life," said Thomas, 43. "From the time I was a little kid our whole family was expected to do things to improve the community."

Following through on his commitment in adulthood was not simple.

"I always thought 'I'll vol-

Volunteer

unteer when I'm rich," he said with a chuckle. "But when your fortunes are up, you don't have time and when your fortunes are down, you don't have time."

Thomas finally made the time, setting aside four hours a week to spend at Children's, because "I wanted to work with kids and it was the only children's hospital in the area."

"The most rewarding thing is that connection you get when you know a child likes you and responds to you and appreciates you. It could be a teenager wanting to talk or a little kid that pulls on your pant leg and says 'Can I have a hug?'"

The former Marine Corps Sergeant worked in several hospital departments before settling on the emergency room about two years ago.

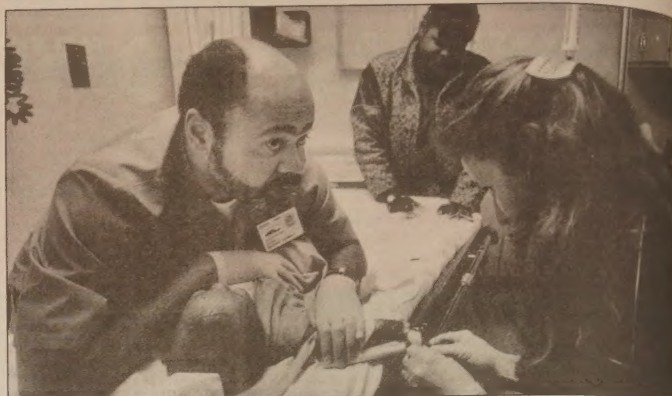

"I like it because you get hands-on experience," he said. "You kind of act as a support system in non-technical duties that the nurses and doctors would perform. It's not a gofer job. You can learn about anything you want to there."

Unlike duty on the wards, "We don't really get to be with the kids for a long time, but it's real intimate the time we do have."

Basich, an "over 40" civil engineer who got his bachelors and masters degrees from Berkeley, was unhappy with the state of the world and said his own life was "not fulfilling."

That changed the first time he arrived for work as a volunteer at Children's Hospital 2-1/2 years ago. Basich immediately found the fulfillment his life lacked.

"My first night there I fell in love with the kids and fell in love with myself," he said. "That first night I was able to walk into any room and work with any kid."

Ellovoy Thomas helps Debbie Adams, RN, with four-month-old Escenthio Margony.

In his first month alone, Basich logged 100 hours on the fifth floor ward of the hospital.

Sensing "where I am needed" is his goal, whether it is assisting hospital staff by preparing and calming young patients about to undergo the trauma of certain treatments or playing with or just providing attention and encouragement to kids alone in unfamiliar surroundings.

It could be unspoken but responsive communication with a very young leukemia patient who speaks another language or lugging an oxygen tank and intravenous along the corridor for a girl who would not otherwise be able to leave her room.

His work at Children's led Basich to put in time at Camp Sunburst, a program that is the first camp for children with AIDS and HIV virus.

Flame-resistant fiber reduces fire hazard

A significant number of clothing fire victims are older adults, reports the National Safety Council.

The garments most commonly ignited are robes, pajamas, nightgowns and other loose-fitting clothing.

The council reminds you to buy clothing, especially nightwear, with fire safety in mind. If possible, purchase clothing labeled "flame-resistant."

Garments made of acrylic, wool, silk and nylon are generally less flammable than those made of other fibers.

Look for tightly-woven fabrics with smooth surfaces. They ignite less quickly than materials with can be removed without being open weaves or rough surface. Try to choose garments that pulled over the head.

 "Center," he said.
 Since he has been in Galloway's as long as he can re-Born and raised in San Francisco, he recalls building a laboratory in a tree house while attending grammar school.
 After high school, he built a telescope and has been interested in astronomy ever since.
 Galloway was encouraged by school teachers to build projects. But he remembers one in particular.
 He built a system that kept a heart alive for about a year.
 Galloway earned a bachelor's degree from UC-Berkeley and a master's in chemical engineering from the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena.

He served for five years on the faculty at UC-Berkeley and then went to Lawrence Livermore Laboratory. He quit the lab when it became involved in Star Wars research.
 Galloway now works with several partners who developed and are marketing a small machine, called the Synthetica Detoxifier, which destroys hazardous wastes without releasing dangerous by-products into the environment.
 Apart from his scientific enterprises, Galloway has family ties to local history and is keenly interested in preserving historic buildings in the East Bay.
 One of his forebearers, Henry Clay Smith, founded Alameda County in the 1840s. And his family in 1925 started Caterpillar

Tractor, building the company's national headquarters and a plant in San Leandro.
 Looking at his years at the science center, Galloway decided the center's most exciting undertaking was when it helped NASA track lunar space missions between 1968 and 1972.
 "We had a huge group of volunteers and three telescopes up there (at the center)," he said.
 "The public came through by the thousands to watch the landing on the moon."
 While support for the center currently is on the upswing, the lesson of history is to maintain constant vigilance, Galloway said.

 he said. "If we do, I'm sure

 Thomas said.
 At San Francisco City College, Thomas met his late wife Mary, a woman who shared his energy and interest in the world.
 "When we first met, she wanted to be a lawyer and an anthropologist," remembered Thomas. Instead she went on to become a teacher and eventually a high school principal in Emeryville.
 While their two children, Alice and Norman, were growing up, both Thomases were active in the local Methodist Church. When Norman was 11, his father got involved in Scouting.
 Later, Mary volunteered as assistant director of the Good Samaritan Center. When ill health curtailed her activities,

Thomas helped out and on her death, took over the directorship.
 Since the day of the stolen meter, the center has been his main responsibility.
 On the days the center is open, Thomas arrives at 7:30 a.m. to turn on the heat, make coffee and set up for the day. At 9 a.m., he hops in the station wagon, prays that it will run and sets out on his rounds, picking up between 18 to 22 faithful attendees.
 At the end of the day's program, Thomas retraces his steps and takes each member of the group home again. By 3 p.m., he's back at the center to clean up and do some paper work.

 His dream is to serve up to 30 people at the center but he's concerned that the van and station wagon won't be able to run much longer — the Pontiac already has 120,000 miles on it.
 Both are being held together by hope and the generosity of a local mechanic, he said.
 Despite these and other worries, Thomas refuses to get discouraged. "I don't let things bother me," he said. "I just keep on going."

WALKER'S RESTAURANT AND PIE SHOP
 If you have been in the Bay Area for any length of time you have undoubtedly heard of Walker's Restaurant and Pie Shop. If you have not, for home cooking served with a smile you have eaten here many times.
 Walker and her brother Doug have run this homestyle restaurant since 1964 in the same location with essentially the same menu and down-to-earth menu that their dad started with in 1930. Their loyal customers span 3 generations and then some. My interest took place in 1965 as a Saint Mary's high school senior.
 Walker served Tuesday through Saturday includes: ham and bacon and cheese and plain omelettes served with hash browns, toast and jam; French toast with bacon and egg; and the "daddy," consisting of ham, bacon or sausage, two eggs any style, toast and jam.
 The lunch menu at Walker's takes two full pages to list old-time dishes and daily specials. Salads and soup, dieter's specials, comfort lunches and burger classics are only a portion of what you will find at Walker's. The sandwich selection alone has eight choices from roast beef or ham to tuna and bacon cheese, all served on wheat or rye.
 Walker's Restaurant and Pie Shop is located at 1491 Solano Ave. in Berkeley. It is open for breakfast Tuesday through Saturday 8 a.m. to 11

MARIO'S ITALIAN CUISINE

Discover old world Italian tradition and cuisine at the Del Norte Shopping Center in El Cerrito. Mario's is an exciting new restaurant offering an appetizing and varied menu that reaches from America to Italy.
 Having eaten at Mario's more than once I can highly recommend:
 the calamari steak prepared with a white wine garlic base and lemon butter sauce; the rigatoni with hot and mild Italian sausage; the chicken piccata served with lemon capers, white wine and mushrooms; and Mario's Thursday special, perfect cannelloni served with a tossed green salad covered with blue cheese, and a glass of Chardonnay from their extensive wine list.
 Mario Addiego, owner and chef, along with chef Mario Pecci, creates these dishes with a masterful touch that show years of training and commitment to perfection that make dishes like veal piccata and pasta carbonara stand out from the imitators.
 Enjoy Mario's Italian Cuisine for lunch Tuesday through Friday from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and dinner Tuesday through Friday 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturday 5 p.m. to 9:30 p.m.
 Mario's is located at 11299 San Pablo Avenue in El Cerrito. The phone number for reservations and daily specials is 237-0033.

HOLY LAND, KOSHER RESTAURANT

Niso and Haya Mizrahi, husband and wife, owners of Holy Land came to America 3 years ago with a dream of opening a kosher restaurant for all people to enjoy this high quality and healthy food.
 Kosher certified by Oakland Supervisor, Rabbi Howard A. Zack, Holy Land serves a variety of salads, appetizers, soups, pitas and main course dinners which include: soup, green salad, rice or homemade french fries.
 My lunch consisted of humus with tehina (sesame seed dip), a cold mushroom salad, stuffed grape leaves, Israeli pickles and olives, falafel and homemade pita bread all beautifully presented and perfectly prepared by this charming couple.
 Also on the menu are gefilte fish and stuffed cabbage (both come with pita bread), beef shishlik, schnitzel, kabob, stuffed bellpepper, fried and corned egg plant and matzo ball chicken soup.
 All items on the menu are available for take out and Holy Land does kosher catering throughout the Bay Area. The restaurant is glatt kosher which is the highest standard for a kosher restaurant. No dairy products are served and smoking is not permitted on the premises.
 Holy Land is located at 677 Rand Ave. in Oakland and open Sunday through Thursday 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., Friday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and closed Saturday. The phone number is 272-0535.

down to the police station to talk with Murdo and "check it out."

Her discussion with Murdo resulted in the neighborhood November get-together.

The effort by these two women to make their block a safe place to live is organized, yet the organization is casual. Each person is responsible for looking out for two other homes.

Betty and Rosie check in with each other each night while they are out walking their dogs. They look out for things that might be amiss — whether it is a burnt-out light bulb over a front porch or a neighbor's dog that has escaped backyard confinement.

Perhaps the women's abiding sense of community stems from their lengthy residence in town. Both Betty and Rosie are longtime Albanians.

Betty was raised in Albany and attended Marin Elementary School. Her children went to school there.

She came to Albany about 34 years ago as a bride. As children, her husband and Betty lived in the same neighborhood.

Betty and Rosie are low-key about their safety activism. "They just want to do what they do without a lot of fanfare," Brown said.

Far from being fearful of crime in their neighborhood, the women stress common sense and being aware of your surroundings. They were jovial in discussing their involvement in Neighborhood Watch.

One recipient of the flyer was alarmed that there is that much crime in Albany.

"It is out there," Betty said. "I think the person kind of misinterpreted it (the flyer) to think we have 'Oh my god! Burglaries once a day.'"

According to statistics released by Murdo, there was actually a 12.6 percent decrease in crime from 1987 to 1988 within the city.

Murdo attributes this decrease, in part, to the many Neighborhood Watch groups that are active within the community.

This time of year is a time to be especially careful, according to Rosie. That is why she and Betty distribute flyers during the holidays.

People are preoccupied with festive preparations and may tend to be more distracted than normal from taking proper precautions.

Mainly they emphasized being alert and knowing your neighbors.

The best crime deterrent, according to Betty, is a preferably one that barks.

Bell ringers raise money in difficult year

Salvation Army helps poor, sick but volunteers, donations down

By Janet Byron

Most of the holiday shoppers hustling by Susie Hing and her bright red Salvation Army kettle did their best to ignore her. But they couldn't get away from the incessant tinkle-tinkle-tinkle — which is just what she hoped for.

"Some people went around the block when they knew I was here," explains Hing. "When I stopped ringing the bell, if they had a conscience, they came to give money."

The kettle money raised by the Salvation Army Berkeley Community Center paid for more than 100 holiday food basket for poor Berkeley and Albany families, senior citizens and the handicapped, and toys for about 250 children. Center members also visited nursing homes, singing carols and bearing gifts.

As a volunteer for the Salvation Army's Christmas kettle drive, Hing was an anomaly in Berkeley. Volunteers donated less than 40 hours for bell-ringing this year, according to Sylvia Martin, who runs the Berkeley Community Center with her husband David.

In order to keep the kettles out on the streets, Martin paid $4.50 an hour for seven part-time bell-ringers. She says that people didn't seem to have the time to volunteer this year.

"They feel funny," Martin says, "about going out and soliciting friends."

Judy Vaughn, director of community relations for the Salvation Army in the Bay Area, explains

'What I do today comes from my heart.'

— Susie Hing

that "it's hard to raise money on the street. It's a very humbling experience, because people walk right by."

Although she would have preferred volunteers, Martin says paying bell-ringers also provides a service to the community. Last year she hired a homeless woman. "I don't mind paying anyone. They do give of their time," she says.

100-Year Tradition

The tradition of Christmas-time kettle collections began in San Francisco in 1891. Salvation Army Captain Joseph McFee placed the first pot on the Oakland ferry landing, at the foot of Market street.

By 1895, 30 Salvation Army Corps along the West Coast were using kettles to collect funds for Christmas dinners for the poor. The practice quickly spread across the country and around the world.

When several malls in the Washington D.C. area refused to allow Salvation Army bellringers inside, First Lady Barbara Bush got national attention by placing $10 in a kettle in protest.

On a Friday before Christmas, Susie Hing, 61, rang a bell in front of the BART station on Center and Shattuck in Berkeley. She saw an old friend go by, and gave her a big hug.

"I haven't got much money today," the woman said as she put a five-dollar bill into the kettle, perched below a sign that reads, "Sharing is Caring."

Two well-dressed women scrounged through their pocket-books for change, which they toss in.

"I like to hear it click — so if I have more change I put it in," said Dagny Bills, an 81-year-old clerk for the city of Berkeley.

"It's something that gives you

Bishwendu K. Paul volunteered to inspect damaged structures after the quake.

Engineer donates time, advice

By April Lynch

Some people might say engineers like Bishwendu K. Paul have an unusual response to disaster.

Most East Bay residents stayed home after the Oct. 17 earthquake and tried to calm their jangled nerves. Not Paul — he donned his hard hat and went to work.

Along with more than 50 engineers in the East Bay, Paul volunteered his time and knowledge to inspect quake-damaged buildings in heavily hit Oakland.

He entered places covered with broken glass and brick, places other people had fled and helped decide when, if ever, those people could return safely.

"Many buildings suffered a lot of serious damage," said Paul, a native of Bangladesh who runs his own one-man engineering firm out of an office in El Cerrito. "But I'm never nervous during an inspection ... unless another earthquake were to hit in the middle of it."

Forget the stereotyped image of the engineer, the scholarly number-cruncher armed with a high-powered calculator and a mechanical pencil.

People like Paul help determine the strength and safety of the man-made world, what will fall and what will stand. Engineers have always known that. It took the October 17 earthquake for others to understand it.

"A lot of people don't realize it but everyone uses engineers ... for their homes, for their freeways, for their water supply," Paul said. "We all use these things every day but we never think about how we got them."

According to Paul, most of the serious destruction caused by the October quake stemmed from older, poorly-designed structures. Devastated areas like the Cypress section of I-880 or Oakland's Emporium had been built before the advent of adequate earthquake safety standards.

Pointing to a new copy of California's building codes on his desk, Paul said, "This is our bible. If we follow even minimal safety standards, we should be all right."

Since the quake Paul, like many other engineers, has found himself trying to straighten out the mess left by an earlier era's inadequate safety standards.

The October earthquake damaged many of Oakland's older roads, stores, office buildings, apartments and homes.

When the city's overburdened building inspectors realized the full extent of the damage, they called on a list of local engineers who had previously volunteered their services in case of a disaster.

Paul, a graduate of UC Berkeley with a master's in structural engineering, was on that list. The city asked for his help two days after the quake struck and Paul spent the next two days examining buildings in Oakland's downtown and western section.

"These guys were a tremendous help," said Greg McFann of Oakland's Damage Assessment office which coordinated with the state's Office Emergency Services to put the volunteers to work with the city's own inspection staff. "With them an impossible job became something we could handle."

According to Paul an engineer first examines a building's original blueprints and then goes around the exterior, through the interior and into crawl spaces to check for damage.

Any leaning or cracks in walls and foundations give the clearest signs of serious structural damage.

In both his volunteer work and his own work as a private consultant, Paul found many buildings that were "still standing but unsafe to be in."

One older house in west Oakland twisted almost a full quarter-turn off its foundation. Others with only minor visible damage actually sustained serious internal damage, with repair costs running between $3,000 to $5,000.

Hanging on the wall of his office, a collection of newspaper articles on the possible effects of a major quake along the Hayward fault indicates Paul's concern that the East Bay's problems did not end with the October 17 shaker.

In Paul's mind the minor cracks in many buildings he inspected "indicate that many buildings would really suffer significant damage if there is an earthquake along the Hayward fault."

The 38-year-old Paul, who has more than 16 years of experience in the engineering business, advises people to prepare themselves by inspecting any building of two stories or more, repairing minor damage if possible, and checking chimneys for damage or cracks.

In addition to the dangers of falling brick, a damaged chimney could also cause a home to catch fire.

"I'm not really waiting for the next earthquake but we need to be prepared for what to do," Paul said. "Now I take my work as a challenge, a challenge to help people prepare. The earthquake showed that the need could arise at any moment."

much of her time doing charity work.

"I can't take my money with me when I die," she explains.

Hing, who contributes to more than 15 charities, recently donated $5000 to build a high school in her Chinese hometown, and plans to give $1000 to the Salvation Army next year to build a canteen in Berkeley.

Despite her largesse, she still found time to stand on street corners ringing a bell for five hours.

"I hope that people will send money to the (Salvation Army) headquarters, or put money in the kettle," she says. "That's what helps the homeless and the poor people."

This was not an easy year for the Salvation Army's Christmas relief efforts in Berkeley. Martin had five kettles, which were out from the day after Thanksgiving to Christmas Eve — when she was able to get people to man them.

The Berkeley Salvation Army's 1989 Christmas fund had budgeted $12,000, but at press time Martin did not expect to raise more than $5500.

"All non-profit organizations are experiencing problems because of the earthquake," Martin says. "Our sources dried up.
The community just doesn't have anything else to give."

In addition to lower contributions to the kettles, Martin received only 200 cans of food for Christmas baskets this year, compared with 10,000 last year.

The fledgling two-year-old Salvation Army Berkeley Community Center serves a dual purpose. It's a church with 20 adherents, and a non-partisan organization serving the broader community.

"We always fight the public image of the Salvation Army," Martin says. "You're either a mission or a thrift store."

Year-round functions in Berkeley include a food pantry, emergency clothing voucher program, youth activities and a summer day camp.

Last Saturday, Martin's 14-year-old daughter Hannah was Trading Post on College Avenue.

Clint Johnson, a 45-year-old Berkeley attorney, stopped to let his five-year-old son Cameron and friend Alexander Mackey put a dollar each into Hannah's kettle.

"When the earthquake happened I gave in my school to the Salvation Army," said Cameron. "I want the poor people to have food," said Alexander.

The Salvation Army, 125 years old next year, serves more than two billion meals worldwide each year to the poor. It also provides numerous less well-known services, including disaster relief, homes for orphans and unwed mothers, alcohol rehabilitation, half-way houses, youth camps, suicide prevention, and day-care centers.

Across town, Leodis Bonner, a 41-year-old Berkeley janitor, manned a kettle in front of Blondie's pizza on Telegraph Avenue during a busy street fair. Bonner says his kids go to the Salvation Army community center every week to play games and sing songs.

"They helped me when I was in need, so I feel I should help them out."

As she puts a few bills into the kettle, Joyce Yaffe, a 38-year-old I.R.S. clerk, says that she donates "because I have money to buy presents and I shouldn't be the only one to profit from my earnings."

Yaffe says she always supports the Salvation Army because she remembers her father telling her how they gave free coffee and donuts to soldiers during World War II.

Another donor on Telegraph is Pam Siefert, a 39-year-old Oakland architect. "It's an irresistible urge in my Christmas routine," she says. "I know where the money goes — to people who are hungry."

Connie Smith, a 25-year-old UC-Berkeley graduate student, has a different motivation for contributing a dollar.

"I feel particularly sorry for them because everyone's shutting them out of malls," she says.

Bell-ringers Susie Hing and Leodis Bonner both say that ringing the bell constantly does not bother them.

"I just switch hands," Bonner says.

"I kind of like the sound," says Hing. "If it bothered me, I wouldn't do it."

State board offers businesses help

California businesses needing help with the task of gearing up for the 1/4 percent "earthquake tax" can seek assistance from the State Board of Equalization which administers the sales and use tax.

Board staff is available to answer questions by phone or in person at 56 offices throughout California and three out-of-state offices in Chicago, New York, and Houston.

The amount of tax retailers should collect on transactions under the new tax rates are listed on tax charts which will be mailed to all sales tax permit holders in November.

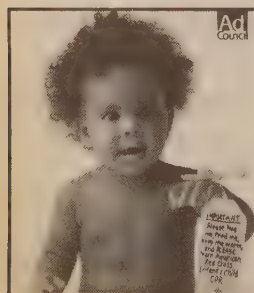

The charts will be accompanied by a special notice which explains how the quarter percent tax should be reported on tax returns.

In addition, easy reference tax cards will soon be available in field offices. The tax cards, like the charts, list the tax to be collected on transactions up to $50. They will be free to the public.

The 1/4 percent tax, effective Dec. 1 for the next 13 months, will raise an estimated $800 million for earthquake relief and rebuilding efforts.

Beginning Dec. 1, the overall sales and use tax rate in California counties will vary from 6-1/4 to 7-1/4 percent — depending on the number of special tax districts currently in effect in each county.

Forty-five California counties will have a 6-1/4 percent rate; eight counties will have a 6-3/4 percent rate; and five counties will have a 7-1/4 percent rate.

IF ONLY THEY CAME WITH INSTRUCTIONS.

Check engine fluid monthly

If you have never checked your automatic transmission fluid, you're like many car owners. That's the one underhood check many people avoid.

The reason, according to the Car Care Council, is that people are intimidated by the procedure.

"More to the point," says Council President Donald B. Midgley, "they don't know how to go about it or what to do if the fluid does need attention."

"This should be part of routine maintenance like checking the oil or the coolant level," he emphasizes.

Transmission fluid should be checked monthly. Get in the habit now, suggests Midgley.

To check your car's transmission fluid have the engine at the normal operating temperature, so the fluid is expanded to its normal level.

Park the car on a level surface with the engine idling and the parking brake set. Move the shift lever through the gears, returning to park or neutral.

Remove the dipstick and, with a clean cloth or paper towel, wipe it dry. Reinsert it, pull it out and note the level and color of the fluid. It should be light red.

Dark red or brown coloration or a burning smell indicates the transmission may have been overheated.

Normal operating temperature for a transmission is 180 degrees Fahrenheit. When it exceeds that temperature, oxidation begins. At 300 degrees the fluid quickly loses its protective qualities and can damage the transmission.

Consult with a transmission expert. You may want him to check for damaged parts; he'll probably recommend replacing the fluid and filter.

If you're pulling a trailer or otherwise giving your vehicle severe service (check your owners manual for detailed definition), install an auxiliary cooler.

If the color of your transmission fluid is a normal red but the level is low, add fluid and have a qualified technician locate the source of the leak.

Not all transmission fluids are alike; be sure you use a quality product of the type specified for your particular make and model of vehicle.

The wrong fluid can cause erratic shifting or damage.

Alcohol related to half of auto deaths

Drinking drivers are responsible for approximately half the people killed in California traffic accidents, according to the California State Automobile Association.

In California, 2,510 persons were killed in alcohol-related accidents in 1988 out of a total of 5,381 traffic deaths.

CSAA issues the following tips for those hosting holiday parties.

- Suggest that your guests form car pools, with designated drivers who agree to remain sober.

- Don't make drinking the primary activity at your party. Focus on dancing, games, food or conversation.

- Make sure that non-alcoholic drinks are available.

- Use fruit juice or tea as a base for alcohol-content punch. Carbonated mixers speed up the rate that alcohol is absorbed into the body.

- Provide plenty of food because it helps slow the body's absorption of alcohol. Offer meat, cheese and other high-protein foods, which stay in the stomach longer.

- At least two hours before the party is scheduled to end, put away the alcoholic beverages. Continue to provide plenty of non-alcoholic drinks.

- Offer your guests a late snack to end the evening.

Quick cures won't help those who have overindulged, CSAA says. Taking a cold shower or drinking a lot of coffee after too much alcohol makes a person wide-awake, but still drunk, the AAA-affiliated auto club emphasizes.

If guests do drink too much, the host can call organizations that offer free transportation to party-goers, pay for a taxi ride home, drive the guests home or let them spend the night.

If drinkers insist on driving, the party-giver can call 911 to reach the local police department or, if highway travel is involved, the California Highway Patrol.

It is helpful to have a description of the vehicle, including color and license plate number.

To help party hosts provide non-alcoholic drinks, a holiday party guide containing alcohol-free recipes has been issued by the California State Automobile Association.

The booklets are designed to encourage party-givers to be responsible hosts and to provide non-alcoholic drinks for guests who are driving.

The guides list 18 alcohol-free drink recipes created by professional bartenders. Among the names of drinks listed are BADD (Bartenders Against Drunk Drivers), Designated Driver, and Sober Thought.

Copies of the booklets are available from California State Automobile Association district offices.

Crashes expected to reach 566,473

During 1990, 566,473 Californians will be involved in traffic collisions.

For most it will mean only the expense and inconvenience of a damaged automobile. But for 356,945 it will mean painful, perhaps debilitating injury.

Worst of all, 5,381 Californians will die in automobile crashes during the new year.

In fact, more than nine out of 10 vehicle crashes are caused by human error. Most damage, injuries and fatalities are entirely avoidable.

While most fatalities are alcohol-related and occur on weekend nights, most collisions occur during heavy commute hours.

Auto collisions occur most frequently between 4 to 7 p.m., and are particularly high on Friday afternoons.

The following pointers should help increase your margin of traffic safety.

- Leave plenty of space between you and the car ahead. Tailgating is one of the most common and dangerous driving habits. Driving too close removes your margin of safety and leaves you at the mercy of the driver ahead.

- Don't rubberneck. Slowing to look at minor incidents, cars being ticketed, or other distractions creates "gawkers block" on the roadways and increases chances of an accident.

- Don't change freeway lanes unnecessarily. You'll get there just as fast if you stick with one lane. Impatient lane changers actually slow down traffic, as well as being a major cause of serious collisions.
